

Psychology Master Class

Thursday, August 27, 2020

A mind is a symbolic information processor which functions, when it functions by binary recursion. The mind is the most powerful life support system possible when it is functional. If you are reading this close to the date it is written, you, the reader are provably not mentally functional. You are proto-linguistic and very easily provably so.

So, here is a very simple method of testing yourself. Let us define a thing, any thing at all. Every possible thing has two and only two characteristics common with every other thing. Every thing has a shape, a limit, a boundary, and between its boundaries is some material difference, or again, some relative difference. This means that every thing is expressible in a binary expression. A thing is also called a unit, a group, or a relative constrained by correlatives. In common grammar, Plato is accredited with calling them a noun and a verb, also, the elements of a thing.

If you could read the Bible, it tells you that mankind would be illiterate, unable to even read or understand it, until after a pure language is introduced to mankind on a global basis affording mankind global communication.

Now, does a computer process all information, any system of grammar, and can it control any machine whatsoever using simple binary recursion? Yes it can.

Every possible system of grammar, every behavior, is expressible using binary recursion; stop, go, stop; absolute, relative, absolute. In short, every perceptible thing can be virtualized and expressed in grammar systems as binary information processing systems. According to the proofs available to you, have you ever seen a grammar book teaching grammar as simple binary recursion?

Being literate, knowing judgment, the ability to prophesize, are all synonyms.

By binary recursion, you can only produced exactly four foundation grammar systems; Common Grammar, Arithmetic, Algebra and Geometry. These form a grammar matrix, the second matrix one has to pass through to become a sapient individual, to know judgment. Do you know them as binary grammar systems which are capable of cross checking, verification, virtualization, by which your behavior is guided by judgment or not? You don't know them.

Think about it. What are you going to do now? Continue thinking and speaking gibberish while your behavior is that of a savage, or are you going to do something to change it?

Can a dysfunctional computer do its job? Can an illiterate person judge right from wrong?

Throughout history, certain sources have been informing mankind that the function of a mind is accomplished by paralleling the perceptible with the intelligible. Patanjali called it parallel walking and used the metaphor of a yoke. Stupid people turned the essay into yoga. Plato called it dialectic, speaking by two together, and stupid people called his work philosophy, an opinion. The Bible is using it to lead humanity into becoming mentally functional; it is part of guided evolution and first contact protocol. It examples it in a main metaphor as Adam and Eve; a Conjugate Binary Pair which, by complete induction and deduction, produces the human race, and again, A Conjugate Binary Pair, which by complete induction and deduction, produces all judgments which allow a mankind salvation. Stupid people call it religion from mystical gods and spirits.

But, you have before you, a computer, which is proving your illiteracy every time you turn it on, and it has no use for that ability. You do. Your own illiteracy has enslaved you all your life. Now people are using the computer to enslave you even deeper. What are you going to do about it? Throw a fit? Or learn? Are you going to blame the world, or blame the truth, you are stupid and only you can change it. Are you going to run to the mentally dysfunctional false prophets, or are you going to commit yourself to self-inflicted therapy by becoming a child again and trying to learn how to think and act like a civilized human being? Are you going to learn your job as a functional mind, or remain the pathetic creature you are and are all around you?

Where is your salvation, the most powerful life support system possible, the mind, or the gibberish of fools? Are you going to learn how to count in the four specific ways binary provides, or die an idiot? Your degree of mental malfunction will determine your answer, not the parasites who feed upon you every day.

Two together from Patanjali to Plato, to the Bible, to the definition of a thing, to your own biology, to geometry, to the computer: Every thing you see and experience is telling you, you are illiterate and being illiterate, you are mentally dysfunctional. Who can change that? Are you going to look for magic and mysticism, or learn how to count?